

Relative Clauses

In class, we have completed lots of work on relative clauses. A relative clause will always begin with a relative pronoun.

that, who, which, whose, where, when

Don't forget to punctuate correctly - especially if you are adding an embedded relative clause.

Write the correct relative pronoun in the following sentences:

- The man, _____ lives next door, might be a werewolf.
- I purchased a new car _____ is bright red.
- I am allowed to go to the park _____ I finish my homework.

For the next few sentences, re-write the sentence in your book with a relative clause included about the underlined noun.

Example: The ball rolled down the hill. —> The ball, which was red, rolled down the hill.

- I went to the shops to buy some sweets.
- Colin turned and marched across the field.
- The park is muddy due to all the rain we have had.

Now, write a paragraph or two in your home learning books about something fun you have done in the last few weeks. Make sure you include lots of detail and think about your SPaG. Your teacher will be checking that you have not made lots of mistakes with Spelling, Punctuation and Grammar.

And of course... make sure to include lots of relative clauses in your writing.
